CITY ADVERTISEMENT.*DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC WORKS

Office of the Board.

RICHMOND, IND., June 26th, 1907.

To Whom It May Concern:

Notice is hereby given by the Board of Public Works of the City of Richmond, Indiana, that on the 26th day of June, 1907, they approved an assessment roll showing the prima facie assessments for the following described public improvement, as authorized by the Improvement Resolution named:

Improvement Resolution No. 87-1907.

For the improvement of the alley between North 20th and 21st streets, by Grading, Graveling and Bouldering of the roadway and the construction of a three-brick gutter therein from North "C" street to North "E" street.

Improvement Resolution No. 99-1907.

For the improvement of the second alley south of Main street running East and West, by Grading and paving the roadway with cement to the full width thereof from South 5th street to South 6th street.

Improvement Resolution No. 100-1907.

For the improvement of Lincoln street by the construction of cement sidewalks to a uniform width of six (6) feet on both sides thereof, from West First street to West Fifth street.

Persons interested in or affected by said described public improvement are hereby notified that the Board of Public Works of said city has fixed Friday, July 5th, 1907, as a date upon which remonstrances will be received, or heard, against the amount assessed against each piece of property described in said roll, and will determine the question as to whether such lots or tracts of land have been or will be benefited in the amounts named on said roll, or in a greater or less sum than that named on said roll.

Said assessment roll showing said prima facie assessments, with the names of owners and descriptions of property subject to be assessed, is on file and may be seen at the office of the Board of Public Works of said city.

EATON'S GALA WEEK*NOW NEAR AT HAND

It Will Open on the First and Continue to the Sixth Day of July.

NATIONAL GUARD EVENT.

THIS ORGANIZATION HAS SECURED UNUSUAL ATTRACTIONS AND EXPECTS TO REALIZE HANDSOME PROFIT.

Eaton, O., June 29.—On account of the extensive advertising that has been given this affair the past week, both in Eaton and neighboring towns, it seems everyone within a radius of 30 miles is aware of the fact that Eaton is going to do something out of the ordinary in the amusement line. This big exhibition is to be under the auspices of the local Company F, Ohio National Guards. This organization is composed mainly of local men, who are hardworking and worthy of any favors that can be bestowed on them.

For this week they have by special contract, signed the famous Roberts shows, combined with the great Bucklin and Gardiner shows. Therefore, instead of but one company, Eaton will have for her approval and recreation, two big companies of attractions.

Besides six big paid attractions, a large ferris wheel and twenty century swings, booths, concessions and numerous other means of amusement, they have also agreed to put on at a special cost three big free acts of the sensational and death defying order, absolutely free of all expense.

In conjunction with the carnival, as is always customary, a big queen voting contest will be conducted by a special agent. The young lady receiving the highest number of votes will be given a valuable present and on Thursday evening of the week of the carnival she will be crowned queen and will reign supreme.

The grand opening will be preceded by a mammoth and spectacular parade, in which all the local lodges will be invited to participate, headed by a royal band of fifteen pieces. After parading the main streets, the mayor will deliver a few appropriate remarks and will then push the button that will start the machinery of all attractions in motion and one of the biggest weeks in the history of western Ohio will be started on its way to amuse and entertain all who attend.

WHITWATER SEEN IN WORLD'S AFFAIRS

Franklin Township Has a Lower of the Flag Wherever It May Go.

LOYALTY CHARACTERISTIC.

PROGRESS OF BUSINESS INTERESTS IS SHOWN IN THE ACCOMPLISHMENTS OF PYLE MERCANTILE COMPANY.

Whitewater, Ind., June 29.—Few places can boast of a greater loyalty to home people or home industries than this little village. Residents of nearly every state and territory can speak of this place as their home at some time. The American flag has gone to no point where it has not had a Franklin township follower.

Few changes have been made in the appearance of the town in the past decades, yet new business places have been built and new merchants taken the places of those grown old behind the counters.

To those most familiar with the progress of the business interests of the community, the Pyle Mercantile company has furnished an example of what can be accomplished by push and energy in any locality.

In 1896, Thos. S. Pyle began operations in a small room and with a very limited stock of goods. In less than ten years this business grew until he was forced to erect for his accommodation one of the largest store rooms in the county outside of Richmond. January 1st of this year his son, C. D. Pyle took an interest in the business and the firm name changed from T. S. Pyle, to that of The Pyle Mercantile Co. The stock has been enlarged and many new departments added. They are now conducting the largest business ever transacted in this section of country. They have received this week from a Richmond manufacturer a model trade wagon, which they will use in getting goods from Richmond and delivering produce to their customers there. Mr. Pyle, Sr., has charge of the buying and will be in Richmond on Tuesday and Friday of each week. They recently inaugurated the rural delivery of merchandise and they keep a wagon for this purpose and that of collecting country produce. Their sales run in the thousands each month. With their equipment and experience in business this firm can not but grow in a business way. They have the loyal support of the community in their enterprises.

Amusements*Vaudeville at the Phillips.

Inspection of the program that has been prepared for this week at the New Phillips in vaudeville would indicate that Manager Murray has made good his promise to give his patrons one of the best bills that he has yet had. As will be observed there are some quite well known names on the program and one or two of the number should prove especially interesting. The two Pecks, in their novelty singing act, are said to be among the very best and Ollie Young and his three brothers as hoop rollers and boomerang throwers are said to be without equals. Last night's double performance concluded a very successful week, the patronage having been big in the face of numerous obstacles. This week the usual order of performances will be followed. The full program is as given below:

Overture, Mr. Chas. L. Stone, musical director.

The Dancing DeLaceys, black face artists.

Mary Madden, monologue comedian.

The Two Pecks, in their novelty singing act, "The Policeman and the Baby."

Illustrated song, "Fare Thee Well My Old Kentucky."

Ollie Young and three Brothers, said to be America's greatest hoop rollers and boomerang throwers.

The cameragraph showing "Jealousy to Madness" and "On the Brink."

Let us eat, drink and be merry. With never a thought of ache or pain. Let us forget every sorrow that might be. For we still have Rocky Mountain Tea. A. G. Luken & Co.

HAGERSTOWN, IND.

[Copyright, 1907, by Homer Sprague.] The pay clerk came to himself while the doctors were working over him. He looked around, mildly curious, and his eyes fell on Miss Stafford.

"You here! But, say, what's the matter? Where am I?" he asked feebly.

"You've been hurt, Mr. Bates—down on the keys, you know. You're at Miami now. Don't you remember the railroad extension and the hurricane?" "Oh, yes. The others saved?" "Not all. But I won't tell you any more now."

He closed his eyes wearily, but happily. The mere fact that the contractor's daughter had felt sufficiently interested to come to him was enough.

At first it had seemed a simple fracture of the arm, but as the days passed complications developed. There were consultations of doctors, and the question of an amputation was discussed. An attempt had been made to keep the gravity of his position from Bates, but the quick brain and keen eyes of that young man pierced the flimsy subterfuges. He divined that he was in a critical condition. Then one day Miss Stafford came again. The nurse was standing near.

"I would like to see you alone a few moments," he began. Then, as the nurse slipped from the room, "Kneel down, Miss Stafford, please, so that your eyes will be on a level with mine."

She knelt, wondering. "That's right. Now look straight at me. I want you to tell me how badly hurt I am."

Her troubled gaze met his and wavered. "The doctors do not know yet exactly," she told him gently.

He smiled faintly, but with something in his eyes that called for a definite answer.

"Come, Miss Stafford—Kate; it's no use dodging. Look at me and out with it. I'm not a schoolgirl. Am I going to die?"

Her voice was very brave, but it hurt her more to tell the truth than it did him to hear it.

"We hope it is not so bad as that. You have been badly shaken, and there are internal complications, but the worst trouble is your arm."

"Are they going to amputate?" "Yes."

His eyes winced, but he held his voice steadily. "They're afraid the shock will kill me—is that right?"

She nodded, her throat swelling to an impossibility of words.

He lay quiet for a time, his face turned to the wall. Her whole heart went out in a surge of passionate pity for the man so stricken, struggling alone in the grimest fight of his life. The girl had the insight to refrain from words, but under the strong impulse she leaned forward and touched his cheek with her lips. His well hand sought hers, found it and gripped it strongly.

When he turned again toward her she was amazed to find in his eyes a shining triumph. She had looked for them to fly the flag of despair, perhaps, or brave endurance, but certainly not this.

"It's all right, dear," he said contentedly. "I have been too diffident—too much of a coward. It may be. But there was talk of you and another man, and—I could see that he was more suitable. I am a poor man, with just my salary, and you and he are wealthy. I never spoke, scarcely dared to look. Yes, I have been a coward. In time I might have won, have?"

"I think you are the bravest man I know," she interrupted simply.

They were silent for many minutes after that, both thinking of what the end might be, the likelihood that he might be going to his death. Of the two he faced the contingency the more calmly.

"After all, death is not the greatest evil that can befall one," he told her. The tide of her emotions was full.

"You know, of course, that I love you, Kate; that I always have loved you, as I am doing with my weakness that I have stood back while others have pressed boldly forward to win you."

She was silent a moment, then, "Yes, I know you love me," she said.

"Almost without hope I have loved. It has been the weakling's part I have played—desiring much, hoping little, compelling nothing. Isn't that a quotation?"

"I don't know," she answered softly. "Love is not like other things. It is not to be compelled. It goes its own way."

His eager eyes shone. "Do you mean?" His voice was very wistful.

Her gray eyes came up steadily to meet his. "Always and always."

"You mean it, Kate? This is no false kindness because I am so ill?"

For answer her full lips kissed his pallid ones. He drew a long breath. "I shall not die. I have too much to live for now. You will see that I shall come back from the shadowy valley after all. Love will conquer death this time."

And it did. Against all the probabilities of science, against the predictions of the celebrated surgeon, he rallied from the shock slowly and steadily. Love had conquered.

How They Fooled the Preacher. When our grandmothers arranged to have chicken for Sunday dinner—for the preacher—they picked out the big gest and fattest and toughest old hen on the place Saturday afternoon and had the boys and dogs "run her down." A tough old hen that is chased all over the place and frightened out of her life is as tender as a spring lamb when cooked. Fright makes any animal, bird or fowl tender, so the books say, and it appears from this that our grandmothers knew what they were about when they had the tough old hens chased before killing—El Dorado (Kan.) Bad Baking Powder EXPOSED

By This "Cooking Test"

This Shows Why Certain Baking Powders Cause Dyspepsia.

The basis of all baking powders is the same—bicarbonate of soda. Egg Baking Powder, famous for purity and wonderful leavening power, contains pure bicarbonate of soda. But instead of using Cream of Tartar or Alum in making Egg Baking Powder, we use Wheat Phosphates and Egg Albumen.

Here is the "cooking test:" Take 2 heaping teaspoonsful of ordinary baking powder, whatever you are now using, add a couple of teaspoonfuls of water and boil until the water has evaporated. If it contains Cream of Tartar and Tartaric Acid the residue will be Rochelle Salts, a stomach and bowel irritant, having no food value at all. If it contains Alum, the residue will be Glauber's Salts, equally injurious to the stomach and bowels. Now repeat the experiment, using Egg Baking Powder. The residue is a little Sodium Phosphate and Egg Albumen, both not only harmless but of real food value. This phosphate material is a most necessary food element—the system demands it.

The residue left in biscuit or pastry by Alum or Cream of Tartar baking powders is indigestible and positively harmful. It sets up constant irritation in one's delicate digestive organs.

If you took it in a large quantity it would be better, for then it would be thrown off. You know an overdose of poison is better than a small dose.

It doesn't pay to trifle with nature. If you take ever so small an amount of poison in the system, you must pay the penalty in injured health.

Use Egg Baking Powder—composed of pure and beautiful ingredients—an aid to digestion, not a hindrance. Insist on being supplied with it. There's nothing "just as good."
